A train on the Fort Wayne, Ind., road was lately stopped for a horse that got mixed up in the still work of a dry bridge. How to get the horse out was the trouble; lever and ropes being tried in vain—finally a well-dressed passenger who had been a quiet observer, pulled off his gloves, seized the horse by the tail, and with one tremendous force hurled him forward upon the plank road. No one assisted, and indeed the whole thing was done so quickly that assistance was impossible. The horse walked away, looking foolish and casting suspicious side glances toward his usual appendage. The lookers on laughed and shouted, while the stranger resumed his kids, muttered something about the inconvenience of railway delays, lit a cigar and walked slowly into the smoking car. He was unknown to the passengers, and only answered that he was a Pennsylvanian, traveling for his health. And the editor of the Chicago Journal voices for the story on personal observation.

A very unusual surgical operation was performed in Worcester, Mass., on Saturday by Dr. Clarke in a case of dislocated fracture. Michael Hart was run over by the cars on the railroad, about ten months since, and his arm crushed just above the elbow. The usual operation of splintering was resorted to, but the bones failed to unite, and a cartilaginous union was formed, producing a false joint. On Saturday, Dr. Clarke proceeded to dissect the ends of the bone, sawed them off, and fitted the ends together, joining them by silver, after which he put the arm in splinters. In this case so far there is a very good prospect of success, in effecting a perfect union of the dislocated bone.

The members of the Japanese embassy were agreeably surprised to learn that their expenses were to be paid by our government. They brought ample funds to pay their own expenses. The Japanese are divided into two parties, one favorable, and the other opposed, to opening intercourse with other nations. The chief ambassador represents the former, and the assistant ambassador the latter party. Each side is required to make a separate report to the Tycoon (the emperor) for the benefit of the nation. These reports, and the judgment of the nation therefore, will be a final decision as to our success or failure in Japan.

The London Times says that if the exodus from Ireland continues she will soon become English and the United States Irish, and the New World is the true home of the Celtic race.

On Friday an Irishman in Auburn, N. H., set fire to some brush, and getting beyond his control the fire spread until it has run over more than two thousand acres.

The late favorable weather has greatly improved the appearance of the crops in Ohio. North of the river everything at present indicates a very favorable harvest.
